

Berlin Library Temporarily Closed beginning March 25, 2020

The Berlin Public Library is closed until further notice following Governor Evers order of “Safer at Home”. All library materials currently checked out will not be due until we re-open and overdue fees will not accrue. We ask that patrons keep all library materials at home until we re-open.

In the meantime, we have many online resources for all ages available to patrons free of charge and available 24/7. Free digital books and audiobooks can be accessed by downloading the Libby app, or logging in with your library card on Overdrive.com. Mango Languages is an online language learning program that offers over 70 languages. Learn technology skills and basic computer skills at your own pace using Tech Skills Center. Magazine and Newspapers are available, as well as many genealogy resources. Visit our website for lists of other free online resources. Staff is available to assist if anyone needs help with these resources.

We deeply regret not being able to provide our normal services during this trying time, but the health and safety of our patrons and staff must come first. Please know that meeting the needs of our patrons is very important to us. Although we will not be in the library, staff will still available to help when we can. For assistance, send an email to director@berlinlibrary.org or contact us on Facebook.

Check our Facebook page and website at berlinlibrary.org for updates. We wish good health to all our patrons, and we look forward to when we can welcome you back!
